The ESWC (e.V.) have announced the keyspeaker for their forthcoming 7th annual European Shareware Conference. The conference will be held on the 3rd and 4th of November at the Cologne Marriott Hotel and Asa Dotzler from Firefox will be its keyspeaker. He is a well-know architect of the famous Firefox browser and will certainly enrich the ESWC 2007 very much.

The ESWC (e.V.) is a non-profit association devoted to providing educational opportunities for shareware developers. The purpose of the conference is to provide a gateway to facilitate sharing information to and for shareware developers, and companies and organizations who provide products and services to them.

This popular educational conference effectively serves as a springboard for developing the relationships between developers, companies that distribute software products, and companies that provide services to software developers.

The European Shareware Conference Association (ESWC (e.V.)) is not affiliated with any other organization.

Further details of the conference may be found at the European Shareware Conference website at <http://euroconference.org>.
